EX-GOVERNOR MALCOLM R. PATTERSON.

ONE of the biggest men in the United States is Malcolm R. Patterson of Tennessee. He is a giant among thinkers and a whirlwind force in big reform movements. He began to impress himself forcibly upon the nation while serving as governor of Tennessee, and since the close of his official career he has traveled all over the United States in one of the most wonderful reform campaigns ever launched. He is a forceful and pleasing orator and will speak at our Chautauque on the subject, "The Mind of the Nation."

PUTS WILSON ABOVE PARTY Republican Newspapers Will Support President and His Policies.

The Yellowstone Daily Journal, published at Miles City, Montana, recently made a declaration of political allegiance to the "best men and measures;" it declared its intention to support vigorously "Woodrow Wilson and the fruits of his administration."

The Journal for many years was issued under the management of Col. Sam Gordon, long one of the wheel-horses of the Republican party in Montana. The colonel four years ago became a Progressive, but since has retired from newspaper management. The control of the paper evidently has been in the hands of parties who have inherited the antipathies which drove Colonel Gordon some time ago to renounce his interest in the party organization with which he was so long affiliated.

"In the coming presidential campaign," said the Journal editorially, "the Journal will urge the reelection of Woodrow Wilson. Yet, let this not be taken as a declaration for Democracy. Regardless of party affiliations, we believe the best men now before the country for election to the presidential chair is Wilson. And further, we believe that his advocacy of world peace, his foreign policy, his program of preparedness, his rebuffed Americanism, and his administration of internal affairs are the wisest policies the nation can pursue. These are the leading issues and upon them hinges the election, as did the nomination. Time, we believe, will vindicate the greater part of what the President has done. He has been building for the future, and many of his acts do not commend themselves to his contemporaries. But their permanent results will some day be apparent, a temporary loss now velling a greater good to come."
